I don't feel anti-love. I feel suspicious of love, and I feel suspicious of what it means to be in love. And I also feel suspicious of what it means to feel pretend love for someone.

~Sara Quin

I don't think people understand how stressful it is to explain what's going on in your head when you don't even understand it yourself.

~Sara Quin

Me being in love with a girl and wanting her to be with me, doing what I need to do to make her stay with me; it affects no one, yet it's terrifying to people and they think you're a monster.

~Sara Quin

I hate being so emotionally slutty. I need to stop loving everyone I have a long conversation with.

~Sara Quin

I live my life in a way that I feel completely comfortable with. I don't struggle with who I am, who I date, who I love, what I say or what I stand for, not just sexuality but everything.

~Sara Quin

Sometimes I worry I'm not going to be the best parent because if my baby gets a skin fungus I might sell him at a garage sale.

~Sara Quin

There's homophobia in every corner and pocket of this world but at the core you just love someone and want to make mixed tapes for them.

~Sara Quin

I didn't know someone could cry that much, I thought the tears would run out. They don't.

~Sara Quin

Sometimes, what probably makes writing songs really easy is that I've generally been attracted to situations that aren't always the healthiest.

~Sara Quin

Although we are Canadian, we have both vowed to remain unmarried in solidarity with the millions who don't have the same rights as us around the world.

~Sara Quin

If I wasn't in a monogamous gay relationship I would have sex with all of you

~Sara Quin

I always say that if I end up in a relationship where I feel like seventy-five percent of what I was looking for is there, then I've already won, then we're all winners in that relationship.

~Sara Quin

The sun's rays don't bother me. No they cast down such a wonderful heat. Masking beauty, by a terrible fate.

~Sara Quin

I am occasionally loveable but for the most part I'm like loving a raincloud.

~Sara Quin

I know how I was born and I know that I have no choice. I know it may not show on the color of my skin, but I know it's in my heart and in my soul.

~Sara Quin

Dallas Green is basically Canadian royalty.

~Sara Quin

I think that bad drama in a relationship has nothing to do with the individuals, it just really has to do with the dynamic that those individuals create.

~Sara Quin

I don't jump in real life, why would I jump in a photo?

~Sara Quin

I have a tendency, not that anyone I've ever dated I thought wasn't a good person, but sometimes you're not always a good match.

~Sara Quin

I just want you that's it. All your flaws, mistakes, smiles, giggles, jokes, sarcasm. Everything. I just want you

~Sara Quin

I've been having a lot of dance parties alone in my apartment while learning to cook. Part of my quest to be an attractive single is to learn how to cook and sew and get a license.

~Sara Quin

Maybe I just stay in relationships for too long and then they get really dramatic.
