When we went to Belfast we saw some beautiful countryside and coastlines.

~Sarah Sutton

I enjoyed showing a bit more leg in the last few stories. It was good fun, but it can be quite sexist. But it doesn't worry me personally all that much.

~Sarah Sutton

There are generations who watch Doctor Who together.

~Sarah Sutton

Before I got Doctor Who, I went to the Guildhall School of Music and Drama. I went back to take the final grade exam, which is the grade you have to take before you can take the teachers diploma.

~Sarah Sutton

I love photography. My boyfriend's got a great camera, which I bought for his birthday.

~Sarah Sutton

I went to ballet school for nine years, and there was an agent for the whole school who happened to be there visiting one of the performances. She suggested an audition.

~Sarah Sutton

I don't know if you've ever tried writing a Doctor Who story, but it's a lot more difficult than it initially appears, especially if you've got more than one assistant.

~Sarah Sutton

The cybermen are good monsters, I think. My earliest memories are of the cybermen from when I used to watch when I was younger. It's nice to have them back.

~Sarah Sutton

In the studio, if they need to come down to the floor, things are a bit pushy, although it is easier for them to say things directly rather than through about five people.

~Sarah Sutton

I often look at a lot of Doctor Who stuff that's about now, which no one has approached me about.

~Sarah Sutton

I'm a terrible person for carrying things around. I carry everything around with me, it's like my home.

~Sarah Sutton

Strikes always leave a bad taste with everyone.

~Sarah Sutton

I would like to direct. What goes on behind stage is very interesting.

~Sarah Sutton

I'd like to do some more classical work if I do some more theatre.

~Sarah Sutton

I do still like television very much, but the theatre does really have something special about it.

~Sarah Sutton

I'm not really a science-fiction fan, I quite like the idea of getting away from the science-fiction side of it, for two episodes. It was lovely, it was a super story and great fun.

~Sarah Sutton

After two years of doing one show, you do get attached to everyone.

~Sarah Sutton

Doctor Who is like any long-running series in that the cast tend to look to the star to set the general tone. Rehearsals and filming could be a lot of fun.

~Sarah Sutton

I like the stories with the historical themes.

~Sarah Sutton

What you don't see backstage is what really controls the show.
