What the church most needs is not heroes of faith, but faithful followers of Jesus.

~Scot McKnight

Jesus wanted far more than to be accepted into one's life. He wanted to take over, and his essential call was to trust him enough to surrender one's entire being to him.

~Scot McKnight

Prayer is the way to die to our own wishes and surrender everything to God.

~Scot McKnight

The assumption that the gospel can be reduced to a note card is already off on the wrong track.

~Scot McKnight

We don't ask what the Bible says, we ask what God says to us in that Bible. The difference is a difference between paper and person.

~Scot McKnight

Love one another strenuously because it's hard.

~Scot McKnight

God's idea of redemption is community-shaped.

~Scot McKnight

God is love so all God does is loving.

~Scot McKnight

One reason why so many Christians today don't know the Old Testament is because their 'gospel' doesn't even need it.

~Scot McKnight

Our biggest problem is that we have an entire culture shaped by a misunderstanding of the gospel. That so-called gospel is deconstructing the church

~Scot McKnight

... the Eucharist profoundly enables the grace of God to be received with all its glories and blessings.

~Scot McKnight

To walk into the Jefferson memorial is to be in a temple of the pure idolatry of reason

~Scot McKnight

God loves us and seeks our redemption, at times through angels.

~Scot McKnight

Angels do not intend to intimidate or scare, but their overwhelming glory and being will stun us into sudden contact with what is far beyond us.

~Scot McKnight

The ultimate end of redemption is that we worship God with our whole being and in the whole company of the redeemed.

~Scot McKnight

God's love entails a covenant commitment on the part of with us, and that covenant commitment means a promise to be with us and for us, and God's covenant is shaped toward our redemption.

~Scot McKnight

Angels will frequently - even when they're comforting us with good news - touch the awe of God's eternal presence and drive us to our knees before our God of glory.
