Always remember there is nothing worth sharing, like the love that let us share our name.

~Scott Avett

Sometimes I'm extremely afraid of the unknown, but I'm so grateful to be on that journey.

~Scott Avett

In the world of music, the audience is not just fans of music; they're fans of many things.

~Scott Avett

I think everyone on the planet is a fan of a painting because everyone is a fan of visual stimulation, but I've had freedom in the world [of painting] because I've kept it to myself.

~Scott Avett

Whether it's about children or not, we have to move forward.

~Scott Avett

In the music world, when we're making work, we are obligated to no longer be completely free from what we are to someone else - sort of like an athlete, where you become a role model to someone.

~Scott Avett

We have to continue to grow within and outwardly. We have to keep going.

~Scott Avett

One of the things that I love about painting is that I never consider myself to have an audience.

~Scott Avett

I have always considered myself an artist and painting was the first medium that I claimed.

~Scott Avett

To me, humor is part of a conversation with an audience.

~Scott Avett

When it comes to performing and entertaining, the art removes itself from the writing.

~Scott Avett

If humor is not present, I tend to be concerned about the artist, or distrusting of what they're presenting - unless there is an obvious tragedy being talked about.

~Scott Avett

In painting, the key is not taking myself seriously to the point where it kills sincerity.
