I believe in struggle. And I believe that the struggle is beautiful. You have to try it or you will never know what's beyond it.

~Scott Cohen

Once you become a producer, you're really selling something. It is a control issue, because you don't really know how it's going to pan out, but the creative control makes it work it.

~Scott Cohen

If I really knew how to do good storytelling, I would be a writer. Mystery is not a huge part of it. ... It's tension, it's relationships. I think it's a struggle.

~Scott Cohen

The most magical moments for me come from the little ones in elementary school. They ask adorable and meaningful questions.

~Scott Cohen

To me good storytelling is about journeys. It's about people's journeys, people's discoveries and how they deal with those discoveries; circumstances that put people in different situations.

~Scott Cohen

When I take a role I wonder how I can use it to find out who I really am. I don't think I'm so rare a person.

~Scott Cohen

There are just times when your body and your soul feed into a character and you somehow meet at the point where that character truly lives in you. It happens in plays, in TV, in films.

~Scott Cohen

I have always wanted to do a book about actors because I think that the death of a character is a tremendously emotional experience.

~Scott Cohen

I've always been creative, with a huge amount of energy.

~Scott Cohen

I want to be in a position where I feel comfortable selling an idea.

~Scott Cohen

Facebook is one way to be able to communicate in a quick way. I never hired a firm to send out pictures and such so I am lame that way. All I can say is how grateful I am for the fans I have.

~Scott Cohen

I have rock climbed but not in awhile. Love all sports, reading, cooking, some carpentry, gardening.

~Scott Cohen

What really put me over the top was receiving a packet of hundreds of hand-written thank you notes, telling me how the kids were inspired and excited about the [Cube] project.

~Scott Cohen

I love talking to all the kids, and have enjoyed the enthusiasm and response from their teachers as well.
