If you took all the sand from all the beaches, all the desserts, and all the oceans and called that the Universe, our whole solar system would be less than one grain of sand.

~Seth Shostak

If this is the only planet on which not only life, but intelligent life, has arisen, that would be very unusual.

~Seth Shostak

Our brains are wired to interpret shapes as faces and bodies. That's why people see the Virgin Mary in the clouds or even in cheese sandwiches. It's your cytoplasm, not some strange ectoplasm.

~Seth Shostak

The search for extra-terrestrial life is a failure until that moment when it suddenly becomes a success.

~Seth Shostak

Despite the impression you may have from watching too much TV, movies are not about reproducing reality. They're about telling stories.

~Seth Shostak

No heating system can deliver perfectly uniform temperatures throughout a house, and drafts can magnify the perceived difference in temperatures. Try walking around with a thermometer.
