I personally love books that make me think, so I naturally gravitate toward writing a book like that, one that's going to make someone think and make me think.

~Sharon Cameron

We're naturally afraid of a spider - these are memories that are being chemically passed down through your DNA.

~Sharon Cameron

I tend to be a very logical, practical person.

~Sharon Cameron

Your truth really can't be twisted. It is what it is. That doesn't mean that a person can't develop and change and reinterpret their life.

~Sharon Cameron

I'm a history person, and I love the groundedness of that, of being able to go, "Yes! People acted like that."

~Sharon Cameron

I don't think I've ever done anything that's completely the same, yet.

~Sharon Cameron

I would never say that I'm not going to do something. I like not being limited.

~Sharon Cameron

I'll tell you what I was most surprised to discover about my writing process, and that is that I never know what I'm doing.

~Sharon Cameron

I think there's a lot that we remember almost chemically, through our DNA.

~Sharon Cameron

I think Scotland is probably my spiritual home and I love it there very, very much.

~Sharon Cameron

I would not give up a lot of what I know about my heritage. I would not give up knowing where I came from, the good parts and the bad parts.

~Sharon Cameron

I do think a lot about the past.

~Sharon Cameron

History is absolutely my thing.

~Sharon Cameron

I am very into genealogy and heritage, and that's how I started writing.

~Sharon Cameron

I love getting into the basement of a courthouse, and all the dusty records - all that stuff makes me really happy.

~Sharon Cameron

I think the past is something I have spent a lot of time thinking about, not only what is different about the past but what's the same, and what links us to the past.

~Sharon Cameron

It occurred to me at some point that what really links us to the past is memory, and there's so much we've forgotten.

~Sharon Cameron

I never have the feeling that I actually know what I'm doing or anything that I'm writing is any good.
