God gives us many gifts, but never permanence; that we must seek in his arms.

~Sheldon Vanauken

If it's half as good as the half we've known, here's Hail! to the rest of the road.

But Love is the final reality; and anyone who does not understand this, be he writer or sage, is a man flawed in wisdom.

Art is first a seeing and then a revealing

It is not possible to be incidentally a Christian. The fact of Christianity must be overwhelmingly first or nothing.

Both Heaven and Hell are retroactive, all of one's life will eventually be known to have been one or the other.

Signs must be read with caution. The history of Christendom is replete with instances of people who misread the signs.

A man in the jungle at night, as someone said, may suppose a hyena's growl to be a lion's; but when he hears the lion's growl, he knows damn well it's a lion.
