Women become breadwinners, men become caregivers. That's the birth of intimate marriage.

~Stephen Marche

You have two things happening: You have the cultural and economic reality of men falling apart and traditional masculinity falling apart.

~Stephen Marche

The first things that babies can notice is sex; the first thing that you can tell about a person when you see them walking down the street is their gender.

~Stephen Marche

The wilderness within us is actually the best part of us.

~Stephen Marche

When you look at the biggest study of the American dream, the number-one correlate for upward mobility is having two parents in a home. It doesn't matter if they're male or female.

~Stephen Marche

Men who define themselves as breadwinners are going to have to leave the traditional iconography of masculinity behind if they want to be breadwinners.

~Stephen Marche

I'd never call myself a feminist, and that the world doesn't need male feminists.

~Stephen Marche

Men's gender problems cause them a lot of suffering. There is a massive spiking suicide rate in middle age for men and a cultural attitude to male friendship that is destructive.

~Stephen Marche

The problem with the way we discuss gender is that it tends to be "Let's sympathize with women" or "Let's sympathize with men."

~Stephen Marche

You cannot have an advanced economy while holding women back from the workplace.

~Stephen Marche

Culture is always the echo of economic realities; that's what Marx teaches. Feminism is a clear example of that.

~Stephen Marche

Almost all the voices in history have been men, but on this one question of gender, men don't talk about it. This has nothing to do with women; it has to do with men.

~Stephen Marche

Marriage is this black box which is the key to all social and political problems; the family is the unit.

~Stephen Marche

Toronto may be the only city where novels are integral to high art, the alternative scene and mainstream culture all at the same time.

~Stephen Marche

Whenever I read a book about a marriage, I always feel I'm being lied to.

~Stephen Marche

Men are not taking women's job, which are good jobs. Being a nurse is an excellent job.

~Stephen Marche

Marriage is not one point of view: it's a constant back and forth over different perspectives - a healthy marriage, anyway.

~Stephen Marche

Marriage is an an inherently contradictory state. It involves the fusion of two people into one thing. And it's also love, and it's a lot of work, and it's got glory in its drudgery.
