That I learned even as a three year-old that I see this world that is really a mess and I learned to say, this is not me. I am not the one that is messed up. It is out there.

~Story Musgrave

Poetry is its own medium; it's very different than writing prose. Poetry can talk in an imagistic sense; it has particular ways of catching an environment.

~Story Musgrave

I'm such a long-term investor, I've never really let go and celebrated what I did with the Hubble telescope.

~Story Musgrave

There really isn't a time to pause and have a celebration. I feel so serious about the whole thing.

~Story Musgrave

I never read a single book as a child. I did not read as a child. I worked on the farm. I had books in the classroom, but that was it. I never read a single book outside of the classroom.

~Story Musgrave

I came from an extraordinarily dysfunctional family, full of abuse and alcoholism. And eventually everyone within the family had committed suicide.

~Story Musgrave

The way you remember the past depends upon your hope for the future.

~Story Musgrave

I have a great relationship with animals, and with children. I get to their level. I try to see the way a child looks at the world, it's hugely different.

~Story Musgrave

Getting out of the comfortable path, that's what exploration is all about.

~Story Musgrave

It's hard to say what drives a three year-old, but I think I had a sense that nature was my solace, and nature was a place in which there was beauty, in which there was order.
