I Love photographing. It's that simple.

~Stuart Franklin

Good photographs aren't just complex. They are enigmatic. Images are beguiling. And the way they play into our psychology, into our visual cortex, is something we still don't understand.

~Stuart Franklin

We sort of understand how painkillers work. You take one, and it reduces your headache. We don't understand how photographs work. And that, to me, is an essential problem as a practitioner.

~Stuart Franklin

I love photographing. I love the experience of being around all the things that surround you when you go out to do work.

~Stuart Franklin

After my mother died, I lived with relatives. Reading was a means of escaping into other worlds, as photography, much later, was to become.

~Stuart Franklin

There's an awful lot of work being done that no one ever sees, or that is only seen in the gallery world. I feel that the public are losing touch with the great stuff that's being done in photography.

~Stuart Franklin

It's quite difficult to write about photography as a photographer. A lot of better photographers than me have declined to do it.

~Stuart Franklin

It's certainly important to include text beside documentary photographs. Furthermore, it's important to include text in a way that's useful and accessible.
