Moscow seethes and bubbles and gasps for air. It's always thirsting for something new, the newest events, the latest sensation. Everyone wants to be the first to know. It's the rhythm of life today.

~Svetlana Alliluyeva

The one good thing about not seeing you is that I can write you letters.

~Svetlana Alliluyeva

When you have once gained sight, it is impossible to feign blindness.

~Svetlana Alliluyeva

As a result of half a century of Soviet rule people have been weaned from a belief in human kindness.

~Svetlana Alliluyeva

I like old people, just as I like old trees: in their shadow there is freshness and peace, one admires them, and around them everything is so calm.

~Svetlana Alliluyeva

It became clear to the whole world that a totalitarian regime could neither accuse nor transform itself: suicide was not in its nature, it could only kill others.

~Svetlana Alliluyeva

It is human nature that rules the world, not governments and regimes.

~Svetlana Alliluyeva

Go to meet destiny halfway and destiny will come to your assistance.

~Svetlana Alliluyeva

God grants an easy death only to the just.

~Svetlana Alliluyeva

all large cities are alike at night.

~Svetlana Alliluyeva

Everything on our tormented earth that is alive and breathes, that blossoms and bears fruit, lives only by virtue of and in the name of Truth and Good.

~Svetlana Alliluyeva

History is a stern judge.
