Yet some men say in many parts of England that King Arthur is not dead, but had by the will of our Lord Jesu into another place; and men say that he shall come again, and he shall win the holy cross.

~Thomas Malory

What, nephew, said the king, is the wind in that door?

~Thomas Malory

Always Sir Arthur lost so much blood that it was a marvel he stood on his feet, but he was so full of knighthood that knightly he endured the pain.

~Thomas Malory

For, as I suppose, no man in this world hath lived better than I have done, to achieve that I have done.

~Thomas Malory

The month of May was come, when every lusty heart beginneth to blossom, and to bring forth fruit.

~Thomas Malory

And much more am I sorrier for my good knights' loss than for the loss of my fair queen; for queens I might have enough, but such a fellowship of good knights shall never be together in no company.

~Thomas Malory

Enough is as good as a feast.

~Thomas Malory

The joy of love is too short, and the sorrow thereof, and what cometh thereof, dureth over long.

~Thomas Malory

The very purpose of a knight is to fight on behalf of a lady.

~Thomas Malory

We shall now seek that which we shall not find

~Thomas Malory

Wit thou well that I will not live long after thy days.

~Thomas Malory

For as well as I have loved thee heretofore, mine heart will not serve now to see thee; for through thee and me is the flower of kings and knights destroyed.

~Thomas Malory

The sweetness of love is short-lived, but the pain endures.

~Thomas Malory

Queen Guenever, for whom I make here a little mention, that while she lived she was a true lover, and therefore she had a good end.

~Thomas Malory

With that truncheon thou hast slain a good knight, and now it sticketh in thy body.
