I'm not an anti-online person. I get what the modern world's about and I understand that that's the nature of music dissemination.

~Tim Hecker

I love vinyl, but I'm not a 'vinyl person'. I still collect, but most of my stuff is digital.

~Tim Hecker

You have to make rough decisions with sequencing and work within the limitations of having good audio for 15 minutes on a vinyl side.

~Tim Hecker

My peer network is international. It's people all over the place who I know, and respect their work. It's not really delineated by traditional nationalist ideas.

~Tim Hecker

I'm trying to find a way to make music work as a living. People used to make their living selling albums. Those days are over! It's kind of an odd time. I guess it's kind of like writing.

~Tim Hecker

I found all my reading and writing informed my music in subtle ways. Ravedeath came out of studying the pipe organ, going to New Jersey - the world's loudest and biggest pipe organ.

~Tim Hecker

I take the literary or textual aspect really seriously and I really enjoy writing weird album titles. I did a PhD; I enjoy writing.

~Tim Hecker

I'm not a peak oil person. I'm not a biohazard apocalyptic kind of freak. I don't have a supply of weapons or gold bars under my house.

~Tim Hecker

I download music just like anybody else, but it's a weird relationship when you're a musician.

~Tim Hecker

Vinyl's just a fun endgame step. I work with analogue signal chains too, but the mp3 is the way I listen to music.

~Tim Hecker

Offness yields a hypnotic effect. The brain can see simplistic patterns that lock and it's boring after a while. I don't cater to that.
