Better to know the quick pain of truth than the ongoing pain of a long-held false hope.

~Trudi Canavan

Wisdom and knowledge is everywhere, but so is stupidity.

~Trudi Canavan

He had given her too much. He had given her everything.

~Trudi Canavan

What was I thinking? Of all the assistants I could have wound up with, why did I have to choose the one with the scary mother and troublemaking in his bloodlines? I am doomed.

~Trudi Canavan

There's always a bit of truth in each rumour, the trouble is finding out which bit. - Tayend

~Trudi Canavan

Mortals did not need gods to order them to kill each other. They were quite capable of finding reasons to do so themselves.

~Trudi Canavan

Happy endings are a luxury of fiction

~Trudi Canavan

Great. She shook her head. Not only am I having conversations with myself, but now I'm refusing to talk to me. This has got to be the first sign of madness.

~Trudi Canavan

Unquestioning obedience is for slaves, the uneducated and the pathetic.

~Trudi Canavan

It is said, in Imardin, that the wind has a soul, and that it wails through the narrow streets because it is grieved by what it finds there.

~Trudi Canavan

If your appearance is all people see, they have no respect for your mind.

~Trudi Canavan

The Magicians Apprentice was about someone from the low end of society manifesting magical power and how that completely messes up the balance of the whole system.

~Trudi Canavan

How am I going to make friends with these people if all I can think of is how easy it would be to rob them?

~Trudi Canavan

Cery: So, Hem, tell me why I shouldn't see how many holes I need to make before you start leaking money?

~Trudi Canavan

Inspiration comes from so many sources. Music, other fiction, the non-fiction I read, TV shows, films, news reports, people I know, stories I hear, misheard words or lyrics, dreams

~Trudi Canavan

It was impossible to imagine the aloof, dignified, powerful High Lord living as, of all things, a slave.

~Trudi Canavan

I wound up studying art and design, got a job at Lonely Planet Publications as a designer, cartographer and illustrator.

~Trudi Canavan

Akkarin: I watched the first woman I loved die. I dont think I can survive losing the second. Sonea: I love you too.

~Trudi Canavan

I have always been fascinated by the supernatural elements in stories, whether fairy tales, myths, film or literature.
