A critic is someone who never actually goes to the battle, yet who afterwards comes out shooting the wounded.

~Tyne Daly

Love is as strict as acting. If you want to love somebody, stand there and do it. If you don't, don't. There are no other choices.

~Tyne Daly

I am a greedy actor in the sense that I like the big bites. Put a big fat steak in front of me, and I will eat it.

~Tyne Daly

Both my parents were actors. I was schooled to think that acting was an important social service, that it was something that human beings need.

~Tyne Daly

I'm interested in playing old ladies because I am becoming one. And I want to become a very good one!

~Tyne Daly

A critic never fights the battle; they just go around shooting the wounded.

~Tyne Daly

I went into the family business. To me, it was the norm and not the exception.

~Tyne Daly

If you accept limitations then, yeah, you'll be limited. If you don't accept limitations then the horizon is pretty vast.

~Tyne Daly

I think the 20s are a vastly overrated decade. We promise kids that once they get out of school, life will begin and their dreams will come true. But then comes the struggle.

~Tyne Daly

I'm sorry I didn't wear paint this morning. I tend not to wear it unless I'm getting highly paid.

~Tyne Daly

Everyone's life is a train wreck. Your life happens to be a high-class train wreck.

~Tyne Daly

I don't have a waist: I'm a breadbox on top of legs.

~Tyne Daly

Sweat makes good friendship cement.

~Tyne Daly

I don't take part in texting and those other things myself, so I don't really know if people put as much thought into messaging as they used to into writing letters.

~Tyne Daly

I'm not glamorous, I don't have a look, I don't know anything about opera, I have no Italian, and I'm too old.
