I sometimes feel that I'm impersonating the dark unconscious of the whole human race. I know this sounds sick, but I love it.

~Vincent Price

It's as much fun to scare as to be scared.

~Vincent Price

In art, religion, and politics the respect must be mutual, no matter how violent the disagreement.

~Vincent Price

Man has ruled this world as a stumbling demented child king, long enough. And as his empire crumbles, my precious black widow shall rise as his most fitting successor.

~Vincent Price

I don't play monsters. I play men besieged by fate and out for revenge.

~Vincent Price

Do you ever rub your eyes and suddenly find you're awake and not asleep, as you'd grown to suspect you were?

~Vincent Price

We exponents of horror do much better than those Method actors. We make the unbelievable believable. More often than not, they make the believable unbelievable.

~Vincent Price

A man who limits his interests limits his life.

~Vincent Price

There is nothing more soul-satisfying than the first succulent bite into the juicy frankfurter.

~Vincent Price

Art is excitement which if we can't create ourselves, we can at least, through love of it, make available to others.

~Vincent Price

We may all be a peculiar lot...often broke, often dissatisfied because we're not doing more and better work...but we know how to have a ball that makes the rest of the world seem square.

~Vincent Price

Be curious about life, and cautious with it!

~Vincent Price

I know what I likeâ€”I like artâ€”and I like what I know.

~Vincent Price

What's important about an actor is his acting, not his life.

~Vincent Price

No one but Gene Tierney could have played 'Laura.' There was no other actress around with her particular combination of beauty, breeding, and mystery.

~Vincent Price

Someone called actors 'sculptors in snow.' Very apt. In the end, it's all nothing.

~Vincent Price

I trust people who are violent about art, as long as they aren't closed-minded. But, unfortunately, most art blowhards are also art bigots.
