Hide what you have to hide
And tell what you have to tell
You'll see your problems multiplied
If you continually decide
To faithfully pursue
The policy of truth

~William Batchelder Greene

Some fearful sights there be that creep
By night - I mean that harass sleep; But tenfold more alarming seem these when They brave the day, to breathe the air like men.

~William Batchelder Greene

Faith is reason denying absurdity in the face of the unknown.

~William Batchelder Greene

Truth was truth, whether I darkened my eyes to it or not.

~William Batchelder Greene

For man, the death of the body is inevitable, and is determined by time and circumstance; but, with proper precaution, the death of the soul may be totally avoided.

~William Batchelder Greene

Woman, thou art a river, deep and wide,
Of waters soft and sweet:
Alas! I've never reached the other side;
Though oft I've wet my feet!

~William Batchelder Greene

How Time doth lash us with sharp pains,
Set loose our teeth, snatch wisps of hair, dim eyes --
And finally bend our backs toward earth
To find the fittest place for burial.

~William Batchelder Greene

Life is a waste of woes,
And Death a river deep,
That ever onward
flows, Troubled, yet asleep.

~William Batchelder Greene

The Ideal is the invisible Sun which is always on the meridian of the soul.

~William Batchelder Greene

Man's life is entirely in his operations, which may all be classed under three heads: he thinks, he feels, and he acts -- these three modes of activity exhaust his powers.
