There is nothing more corrupting, nothing more destructive of the noblest and finest feelings of our nature, than the exercise of unlimited power.

~William Henry Harrison

The liberties of a people depend on their own constant attention to its preservation.

~William Henry Harrison

I believe that all the measures of the Government are directed to the purpose of making the rich richer and the poor poorer.

~William Henry Harrison

Times change, and we change with them.

~William Henry Harrison

Sound morals, religious liberty, and a just sense of religious responsibility are essentially connected with all true and lasting happiness.

~William Henry Harrison

The prudent capitalist will never adventure his capital . . . if there exists a state of uncertainty as to whether the Government will repeal tomorrow what it has enacted today.

~William Henry Harrison

The only legitimate right to govern is an express grant of power from the governed.

~William Henry Harrison

A decent and manly examination of the acts of government should not only be tolerated, but encouraged.

~William Henry Harrison

All the lessons of history and experience must be lost upon us if we are content to trust alone to the peculiar advantages we happen to possess.

~William Henry Harrison

Conscience, that vicegerent of God in the human heart, whose "still small voice" the loudest revelry cannot drown.

~William Henry Harrison

The chains of military despotism, once fastened upon a nation, ages might pass away before they could be shaken off.

~William Henry Harrison

To Englishmen, life is a topic, not an activity.

~William Henry Harrison

The plea of necessity, that eternal argument of all conspirators.

~William Henry Harrison
