If you're sincerely seeking God, God will make His existence evident to you.

~William Lane Craig

It's no longer enough to teach our children Bible stories; they need doctrine and apologetics.

~William Lane Craig

More often than not, it is what you are rather than what you say that will bring an unbeliever to Christ. This, then, is the ultimate apologetic. For the ultimate apologetic is: your life.

~William Lane Craig

The mere possibility provides no warrant for denying what I clearly grasp.

~William Lane Craig

If true love came at a price, the price would be all worth while if i was spending it on you.

~William Lane Craig

Faith is trust or commitment to what you think is true.

~William Lane Craig

Part of the broader task of Christian scholarship is to help create and sustain a cultural milieu in which the gospel can be heard as an intellectually viable option for thinking men and women.

~William Lane Craig

Certainty is an unrealistic and unattainable ideal

~William Lane Craig

The point is that if there is no God, then objective right and wrong do not exist. As Dostoyevsky said, "All things are permitted."

~William Lane Craig

The renaissance of Christian philosophy has been accompanied by a resurgence of interest in natural theology, that branch of theology that seeks to prove God's existence apart from divine revelation.

~William Lane Craig

It's the combination of improbability with an independently given pattern that discredits chance.

~William Lane Craig

Reason is a tool to help us better understand and defend our faith; as Anselm put it, ours is a faith that seeks understanding.

~William Lane Craig

The person who follows the pursuit of reason unflinchingly toward its end will be atheistic or, at best, agnostic.

~William Lane Craig

I am an Orangeman first and a politician and member of this parliament [Stormont] afterwards.
