Life is a train that stops at no stations; you either jump aboard or stand on the platform and watch as it passes.

~Yasmina Khadra

Music is the true breath of life. We eat so we won't starve to death. We sing so we can hear ourselves live.

~Yasmina Khadra

The man who let the love of his life pass him by will end up alone with his regrets and all the sighs in the world won't soothe his soul.

~Yasmina Khadra

Though there are things beyond our understanding, for the most part we are the architects of our own unhappiness.

~Yasmina Khadra

For a man to think he can fulfil his destiny without a woman is a misunderstanding, a miscalculation; it is reckless and folly. Certainly a woman is not everything, but everything depends on her.

~Yasmina Khadra

We've already been killed, all of us. It happened so long ago, we've forgotten it.

~Yasmina Khadra

We're fine together, just like this: Our silence protects us from ourselves

~Yasmina Khadra

There's nothing, absolutely nothing, more important than your life. And your life isn't more important than other people's lives.

~Yasmina Khadra

You're all the world to me. Whenever i can't see you... I die a little.

~Yasmina Khadra

You can know all there is to know about life and mankind, but what do you really know about yourself?

~Yasmina Khadra

Get a grip on yourself. there's only one god here on earth, and that's you. If you don't like the world, make one you like better.

~Yasmina Khadra

Culture is always about politics in the end.
